

Loop and Feedback System

It turns out that we work with a middleman, an authority figure and, moreso, a benevolent and completely loving partner – what some have referred to as God. Our prayers are reflected back to us precisely as we put them out. As we become more responsible, capable and conscious, we output our prayer, and our realities are returned accordingly. No judgment – just a perfect loop and feedback system, ours to upgrade and define and refine as we wish, the price being courage and truth, alignment with Innate Intelligence and a smattering of perception, receptivity and choice.

We live in an interactive Universe for which nature's system of success delivers based not only upon our capacity to output, but to receive. What we output and what we understand is how we partner with existence in our capacity to receive what is available to us. How to pick and choose our realities becomes the game, for that is how we steer our realities and momentum into ever greater change and momentum. We are creators; we output, and we are the recipients of what we output. We have choice, and we have indwelling Spirit as our partner! As we make intentional use of our partnership with Innate Intelligence, we engender more useful momentum in our lives.

In the past, we believed we were the recipients of the bounty of God or the love of God, for which we had little or nothing to say, though some seemed to get more than others. We are discovering the subtle nature of reality creation, which says that we are each the recipients of our own creativity, our own prayer, our own output and our own good. Ultimately, we are recipients of our own love, our own gratitude, our own courage and the quality of intent that underlies our outpourings. The Universe has and always will reflect perfectly back to us. It is just a matter of learning how to “choose once again” and begin to create with a more useful momentum in our lives.

As we take our hands off the steering wheel of our accustomed methods of creating reality, we learn to harness this loop and feedback system that is such an integral part of our reality creation. Our job is to pick and choose among the spectrum of our incoming realities in our most conscious and receptive manner, for which we again output and choose our results accordingly. Ultimately, we manage our realities as a momentum and stream of receptivity and choice, not so different from cowboys directing a herd of cattle, but ultimately similar to herding a river or flow of water, already knowing where it is going.

We become receptive to the idea that our own highest good exists as a part of our output; all the while we spew a multitude of perspectives simultaneously. Imagine the idea that we have only one choice and only one reality. Not much choice there! New choices, new realities; new realities, new choices; new choices, new momentum; and on it goes. Every day we can see evidence for the quality of our realities as we make our way into new and differing choices!
