

of a light rain shower - something for which we give up control and instead happens in splendor, synchronicity and effortlessness.

Connecting the Dots

As we release what does not serve us, we make room for more in our lives. There is no way to experience flow while under the influence of grudges, expectations, anger or resentment. A cleaning and clearing of our system, our hang-ups and our limitations must be replaced with a knowings of our connection and innate capacity for amperage coursing through our system. Allowing and gratitude are key as we refine our systems of belief, for which guidance becomes indispensable as we choose once again.

It behooves us to review our synchronicities, happenstances and flow events in a more useful manner. As comfort and ease infiltrates our experience, we move forward with newfound ease and grace. We decipher resonance for events drawn into our lives as guidance propelling us toward “finding the groove” of our beliefs, our momentum and our choices. As we consent to and partner with inner guidance, we see synchronicities, flow events and otherwise resonance and harmony populating our accumulating reality. Eventually, we get a clear picture for what nature “nods for” in our thoughts and choices.

Initially, these events are fleeting and our “observer” mode strong, returning us to our old style realities all too quickly. It would be our intent, then, to see hints in our successes (i.e., synchronicities, flow events, resonances) and line them up as breadcrumbs toward what the Universe supports and for which our visionary focus becomes a valuable tool and directional device. As we recognize synchronicities and flow events as reflections of what nature is supporting, we refine our vision accordingly. At the same time, we allow the results of our old momentum, to simply stream by, as we sift our way toward conscious intent, newfound focus and alignment with Universal Forces.

LUCIDITY

It is not for us to decide what we want and push forward come hell or high water, though this has been a popular method for getting things done in the past. It is ours to try on ideas, to try visionary models and to look for hints of the Universe's support. As we look for resonance suggesting the amount of support we might be able to attain, we refine our visionary focus and we continue to make choices. We watch for what the Universe suggests, and, lining up the dots, we find clarity in our momentum. Seeing the difference between what we want and what the Universe supports is an interesting opportunity to learn to trust and accept a bigger picture. It is a part of our cosmic adolescence.

As we refine our capacity for alignment with our inner nature and outward circumstances, we experience more and more synchronicity and order in our lives. As we delve further into the innateness of life, we find our paths crossing with others of like vibration and outpouring. We begin to meld with the momentum of others, and our sense of wholeness continues to expand. We enter and become one within a shared matrix of wholeness.

In clarity and momentum, there are others who live their lives in octaves of flow similar to our own. As we increase our capacity to accept the biddings of Universal Correspondency, we find our paths crossing and our flows and synchronicities interlinking. It could be said, then, that we are not only the recipient of the grandeur of Universal Forces in our own lives, but a participant in the synchronicities of others, as well. After all, who says that being a recipient of the intent of the cosmos is our only function?

As our momentum aligns and blends within a matrix of synchronicity and wholeness, we fill in the cracks and provide happenstance for each other, all the while extending our own momentum and outcomes. In our correspondency with nature, as we rise through the calibrated Map of Consciousness, we meet other visionaries plying the forces of nature in each their own way. We feel compelled to experience activities that become a blending of our wishes with the flow of others. In a new level of correspondency and flow, we scratch each other's backs and deliver to each other gifts as we inadvertently mesh with each other's wishes and outcomes. It turns out there is more to flow than simply being a wide-eyed recipient of Universal Forces.

A Matrix of Wholeness

By way of example, I attended a conference in Victoria, British Columbia, for which Barbara Marx Hubbard was one of the main speakers. Certainly, in preparing for her presentation, she had been gathering her forces, directing her staff, arriving at her destination, and concluding momentum toward what would become her talk. As her momentum headed toward its culmination, others were caught up in the intent of her thought and focus. It is likely she was unaware of many incidental events that ultimately lent to the overall support of her speaking engagement.

Instepwithmyownsynchronicities,happenstances and delicious periods of flow, I became a player in her synchronicities and momentum without my knowing. Plans were dashed as nature better sorted outcomes and gently placed me into circumstances other than I might have chosen, as I attempted to act out my itinerary and travel plans for the conference. My Seattle rental car failed to materialize, and instead offered me the opportunity to take a 6-hour bus shuttle to Victoria. Furthermore, because of the failure of my rental car to materialize, I was unable to take advantage of the beautiful harborside hotel I had planned for myself.

So much for the convertible and hotel that boasted the best seafood restaurant on the waterfront, or my intent to tour Vancouver Island after the conference. Nature in its alignment with my true wishes and underlying quality of intent instead delivered me to a campus dorm
